

Director of Point-of-Care Ultrasound for Prisma Health–Upstate

From Jim Ellis, MD, vice president of clinical affairs, chief of staff, Prisma Health–Upstate

I am excited to announce that Dustin Morrow, MD, has assumed the position of director of Point-of-Care Ultrasound (POCUS) for Prisma Health–Upstate.

For the past four years, Dr. Morrow has served as the Division Chief of Emergency Medicine Ultrasound as well as Director, Ultrasound Education at University of South Carolina School of Medicine Greenville. Additionally, he leads a POCUS subcommittee responsible for developing affiliate level policies. Dr. Morrow will continue to serve in these positions in addition to his new role.

As Director of POCUS, Dr. Morrow will work with every Upstate department that uses POCUS to ensure uniform integration and utilization of ultrasound studies performed and interpreted by clinicians at the bedside. He will also work with our Midlands team members to standardize the approach to POCUS across Prisma Health.

We look forward to Dr. Morrow's leadership as the use of POCUS in the delivery of patient care continues to grow, evolve, and expand throughout Prisma Health–Upstate. Please join me in congratulating him on his new role.
