

Scott Looper retiring; Thomas Moore named Clinical Imaging Services director
From Glenn Wert, operations executive, Diagnostic & Interventional Imaging Services

It is with mixed emotion I share with you the retirement of Scott Looper, Clinical Imaging Services director. Scott has served Prisma Health and our community for nearly 30 years. I appreciate many things about Scott's service through the years, but none more than his leadership as we transitioned Centralized Scheduling from the Business team to the Radiology department. Please join me in thanking Scott for all his service to our organization and community over the years. He will be missed.

With Scott's retirement, I am pleased to announce that Thomas Moore has accepted the vacated position of Clinical Imaging Services director. Thomas has been with Prisma Health since 2006 where he started as a radiology technologist at Greenville Memorial Hospital. Thomas has demonstrated not only his leadership skills but also his ability to adapt as he went on to become our first Imaging Services manager to oversee two campus operations, serving as Imaging Services manager for both Patewood Hospital and Laurens County Hospital. Thomas has served as the interim Clinical Imaging Services director during Scott's leave. He officially transitions into his new role this week.
