

University of South Carolina football game features Prisma Health, Saturday, Sept. 28

Prisma Health is teaming up with University of South Carolina (UofSC) Athletics at this Saturday's football game at Williams-Brice Stadium as the Gamecocks host Kentucky (Saturday, Sept. 28, 7:30 p.m.). We are letting Gamecocks fans know about some upcoming important initiatives for breast cancer awareness, including the Walk for Life and Famously Hot Pink Half Marathon, 5K + 10K on Saturday, Oct. 12.

Prisma Health and UofSC are committed to improving the health of Gamecock Nation by providing education and opportunities about the resources that are available in our communities. Prisma Health already provides the best in comprehensive health care for UofSC student-athletes through the many doctors, surgeons, athletics trainers and mental health providers that make up the Gamecock Sports Science Network.

Prisma Health is not only the largest health care system in South Carolina, but it also offers comprehensive breast health services featuring digital mammography as well as the Midlands' only digital mobile mammography service, which fans can visit on Saturday at the Gamecock Village before the game.

Fans can also visit the Prisma Health tent to pick up information about the 29th Annual Walk for Life and Famously Hot Pink Half Marathon, 5K + 10K, which will be held on Saturday, Oct. 12 at Segra Park.
